As an employer of more than 250 employees we are required by legislation to publish a Gender Pay Gap Report in 2022 and each year going forward. The results of this report will be considered by Senior Management and kept in mind when making relevant operational decisions in future. The report is intended to start a conversation internally to address gender gaps in the workplace and highlight areas where intervention may be needed in the future.

As a simplistic description, the gender pay gap outlines the difference in the average hourly wage of all men and women in our company. It is not reflecting equal pay for the same work or flexibility of role or work patterns. It's results will depend on the distribution of gender throughout each layer of our business. Given the industry we work in, and the nature of the roles within our business, the majority of our employees are male (82%).

What steps are we taking to reduce the gap?

Carey Glass is an equal opportunities employer. We will continue to monitor our performance in this area and seek to make improvements where necessary. While running recruitment campaigns we are always conscious of attracting more female operatives, however, given the industry in which we operate and the nature of the roles within that industry the majority of applications which we receive are from males.

We will compare our results to similar organisations and benchmark ourselves against the most progressive of industry leaders. We are confident as each annual report is produced it will show we are being proactive and taking reasonable and appropriate steps to ensure our business continues to offer fair opportunities, not just to all genders but to all employees across the spectrum of the jobs market.

While the nature of our business has impacted the data we have collected, this is our starting point and we are committed to reviewing our female participation in the workforce on an ongoing basis. Awareness is important in taking the first step in reducing the gender pay gap.
